Re: Identity of Assassin

I think a thorough investigation should be run on a TSBD employee named Jack Dougherty.

On the morning of November 22, Dougherty was part of a crew laying a new plywood floor on the sixth floor of the TSBD. This crew consisted of Danny Arce, Dougherty, Charles Givens, James ("James") Jarman, Billy Loveday, and Bonnie Ray Williams, all regular employees in the TSBD shipping and order filling department. They were apparently working under the direction of William Shelley the regular employee in that department.

In a written statement to the Dallas police on November 22, Dougherty gave the following story: On the morning of November 22, he had worked [with the floor laying crew] on the sixth floor until 11:45, when he went down to the first floor to eat his lunch. He then went to return to work [on the sixth floor] and then went down to the fifth floor "to get some stock," when he heard a shot, which sounded as if it had come from inside the building. He then went on to the first floor and saw Eddie Piper, the TSBD janitor, whom Piper had heard anything. Piper said yes, he had heard [illegible] Dougherty then returned to the sixth floor. [illegible] State of the Secret Service, who interviewed Dougherty [illegible] December 4 and December 5, reported that "Mike Dougherty was interviewed, he seemed to be very confused about time and places. Mr. [illegible] [Kay E. Orr], Superintendent of the [illegible] mentioned [illegible] information that although Dougherty is a very good employee and a hard worker, he is mentally unstable and has difficulty in remembering things such as dates, times, places, and has been especially confused since the assassination." (Orr MFR, p. 1)[1]

I am suspicious of Dougherty for several reasons.

(1) He has no alibi. Of the six employees on the first laying crew, Olivera claims to have been with a friend at a parking lot several blocks away when the assassination took place; Williams and Jackson were together on the fifth floor with another employee named Norman; Lovelady was standing outside and Wiegman (and his photographer) was also claims to have been standing outside the [illegible]. Dougherty was inside the [illegible] all alone.

(2) His story is very thin.

(a) It does not make sense that Dougherty, one of a six-man floor laying crew, should begin working before the others even arrived from lunch.

(b) It is questionable that Dougherty would have had to go [illegible] after a "hook" in connection with the [illegible] project.

1. Dougherty's father told the FBI that Dougherty had received a [illegible] discharge from the U.S. Army and had considerable difficulty [illegible] adjusting to normal civilian life [illegible] (F.B.I. [illegible])

(g) Capone, Norman, and Villineuf were not in the southwest window of the fifth floor at the time of the demonstration, and not from there to the southeast window, nor absolutely no mention of having seen Dougherty on the fifth floor.

(d) It does not seem credible that Dougherty would have gone down to the first floor, found out that [illegible] had just fired, and then casually returned to the sixth floor.

(e) No report indicates that Dougherty or anyone else was on the sixth floor when that floor was searched.

(f) When Dougherty went to the south on the fifth floor, and when the shots were fired at approximately 12:30, Dougherty must have returned to the fifth floor, allegedly to go back to work, because Euins, who arrived [illegible] on the fifth floor with [illegible].

(g) If Dougherty is "mentally retarded," it may explain some of the [illegible] in his story. On the other hand, the [illegible] "mentally" may be an accurate problem, which might [illegible] grounds for suspicion. In this connection, I find interesting [illegible] Dougherty "was [illegible] excused since [illegible]."
